

A method of manufacturing a semiconductor device includes the steps of forming barrier metals on first electrodes provided on a chip of the semiconductor device, implementing a predetermined test on the semiconductor device by applying a signal to the semiconductor device via at least one of the barrier metals, and forming second protruded electrodes on the barrier metals. The predetermined tests are implemented before forming second protruded electrodes on the barrier metals.